THINGS TO CONSIDER WHEN CHOOSING YOUR WINDOW STYLE

Operating style. When we talk about an operating style, we are referring to whether or not the window opens to allow ventilation or, is an inoperable picture window that only allows light to come in. Each room in your home may have a different window need.

Security and privacy. When purchasing non-impact windows and doors, security and privacy remain important considerations. Choose products with sturdy locking mechanisms and well-built frames to help safeguard your home from unwanted entry. For added privacy, options like obscure or tinted glass can limit visibility from outside while still allowing natural light in. By selecting windows that offer reliable security features and privacy solutions, you can create a comfortable, safe, and peaceful living space.

Location. Think about each room individually. First floor windows may differ from second or third floor windows regarding the size, where they are placed on the wall, and how they open. First choose where you want the window to be, and then think about what you want it to do

Ease of use. Look for features that make operation and cleaning simple. Consider the accessibility for all members of your household, as well as maintenance requirements. Choosing windows that are easy to operate and maintain will enhance your daily comfort and ensure long-term satisfaction with your investment.
